Teamstudio® Unplugged is a new solution that enables developers to build BlackBerry® applications within Domino® Designer, and allows end users to access to their Notes®-based apps--with or without connectivity!

Teamstudio® Unplugged extends the power and reach of Notes for developers and end users.

Currently, developers must create XPage applications that BlackBerry® users access via the Web. Unfortunately, they aren't very good-looking (and they don't work so well, either). The end user inevitably experiences problems such as slow performance, bad user interface, and an inability to use the app without a wireless connection.

With Teamstudio Unplugged, developers can easily translate existing Notes® applications into native BlackBerry apps without any low-level Java programming. The end user can then work on an app on the BlackBerry without the need for connectivity--all while enjoying fast performance and a familiar user interface. Replication keeps the local copy of the data on the BlackBerry in sync with the Domino® server back at base.

Teamstudio Unplugged enables you to build mobile apps within the Domino Designer environment--just like building XPages.

Scenario: The Road Warrior's Lament

A consultant for a large technology company spends 80% of his time on the road. When he is in the office, he's in scramble mode, trying to catch up on all his administrative tasks--including pulling together a very lengthy expense report. Since this is a tedious and time-consuming task for him, he almost always turns his reports in late--much to the chagrin of the accounting department.

Teamstudio Unplugged would enable the consultant to have access to his expense report database from wherever he is. He'd be able to add to it whenever and wherever he had time: in a cab, at the end of a meal, at the hotel before bed... And all of this information sits safely and securely on his BlackBerry device until he chooses to replicate with the server back at the office.

The Unplugged Advantage

In today's mobile business environment, Teamstudio Unplugged gives you the advantage by providing an easy and efficient way to mobilize any of your existing Notes applications. Developers familiar with XPages don't need to learn any new skills, and end users enjoy access to their applications whenever and wherever they need them.
